CHALLENGE 1 Jobs Today and Tomorrow: The Productive Society in 2017

Canada's sluggish productivity growth has long been an academic talking point. But few would dispute the need for concrete and constant gains in innovation, learning and workforce adaptation. What are the obstacles that must be overcome? Where are the successes that can be replicated and amplified? And what should be the role of the federal government in pursuing tomorrow's prosperity for all Canadians?

Keynote Address: The Challenge of Our Century

Sheryl WuDunn, Co-Author, Half the Sky: Turning Oppression into Opportunity for Women Worldwide

Throughout much of the world, the greatest unexploited economic resource is the female half of the population. Unleashing that potential is not only the right thing to do, it is also the best strategy for fighting poverty. Sheryl WuDunn, together with co-author, husband and fellow Pulitzer Prize winner Nicholas Kristof, depicts a world with anger, sadness, clarity and, ultimately, hope.

CHALLENGE 2: Real Life Issues for Canadian Families: How Do We Care?

Today's families, and tomorrow's, come in all shapes and sizes. "Sandwiched" between obligations to care for aging parents and school-aged children, more than ever Canadian families are facing financial worries about saving for retirement and for education for their kids. How do we give families the support they need to cope and thrive? What actions are required to help Canadians secure their retirements and provide economic security for our children, our parents, our neighbours and ourselves?

9:30 – 10:15 Pacific How Do We Care: The Future of Health and Healthcare

Few countries attach as much pride and national identity to a social program as Canadians do to healthcare. And yet, uncertainty about its future continues to grow. For the healthiest possible population in 2017 and beyond, what are the priorities in medical research, health promotion, disease prevention, and healthcare system sustainability?

Moderator

Lucienne Robillard, former provincial and federal Cabinet Minister, including Minister of Health and Social Services for the province of Québec

Speakers:

Dr. Alan Bernstein, Executive Director, Global HIV Vaccine Enterprise, New York, N.Y. and Former President of Canadian Institutes for Health Research

Dr. Marie-France Raynault, Director, Former Department of Social and Preventive Medicine, Université de Montréal and of the Léa Roback Research Centre on Social Inequalities in Health of Montréal

Dr. William Reichman, President and Chief Executive Officer, Baycrest and Professor of Psychiatry, University of Toronto Faculty of Medicine

CHALLENGE 3: Energy, Environment, Economy: Growth and Responsibility in 2017

Canadians appear ready to move beyond the dead-end policies of trade-off between the environment and the economy. A 21st Century approach to energy could leverage Canada's resources while protecting the environment and contributing to the global fight against climate change. But how do we make that leap, and what should Canadians expect of the federal government?

11:15 – 12:30 Pacific Clean Energy and Canada's Potential in the Low Carbon World: What's Missing?

Clean energy provides the key to Canada's success both in reducing emissions that cause climate change, and in securing the green jobs of tomorrow. Our major trading partners are acting ambitiously to invest in clean energy. What should Canada do to achieve the right energy mix in 2017, and secure the environmental and economic benefits that will go with it?

Moderator:

Patrick Tobin, Vice-President of Rio Tinto-Alcan

Speakers:

Elyse Allan, President and Chief Executive Officer, GE Canada

Satya Brata Das, Founder and Principal, Cambridge Strategies

Nicholas Parker, Executive Chairman and Co-Founder, Cleantech Group

Steven Guilbeault, Co-Founder, Équiterre

CHALLENGE 4: The Creative and Competitive Economy

We are living in a rapidly changing digital age that is challenging traditional understanding of information, communication, economy and culture. In the decade ahead, what will be the impact of this rapid change on identity, language, citizenship and community? And what should be done today to build on Canada's creative and competitive strengths?

1:00 – 2:30 Pacific Culture and the Digital World

With computing capacity and new media development accelerating relentlessly, what will "culture" mean in 2017, and how should the government ensure Canadian creative expression continues to have access to Canadian and world audiences? How will we ensure Canadians have access to "their" stories? Will these objectives, and the measures traditionally used to pursue them, still matter in 2017? Other countries have adopted ambitious policies to develop their capacity to lead in a global, digital economy. What are Canada's priorities, opportunities and challenges in the digital society and economy of tomorrow?

Glenn O'Farrell, CEO and Principal, GPO Corp

André Provencher, Chairman of the Board, Association des producteurs de films et de télévision du Québec and President, LaPresse Télé

Sheridan Scott, former Commissioner of Competition, Competition Bureau of Canada

Sunday, March 28

Gordon Neighbourhood House
1019 Broughton Street

CHALLENGE 5: A Strong Presence in the World of 2017: Commerce, Values, and Relationships

Our presence in the world matters more than ever, because in an increasingly unpredictable global economy, decisions taken all over the world can have a direct impact on our communities, our livelihoods and our environment. What bilateral or multilateral relationships need to be strengthened to enhance our national interest and quality of life? What are Canadians doing to make a difference in the world today, and how do we build on those successes?

10:30 – 12:00 Pacific Canada’s Presence in the World of 2017: Where Are the Priorities?

Canadians sense our stature on the world stage is less than what it once was. But how do we move beyond the platitudes about “punching above our weight” to a principled, pragmatic and effective role as a middle power? What should the future hold for Canada’s military, diplomatic, development, trade, investment, business, scientific, and academic relations around the world?

Moderator: Sujit Choudhry, Scholl Chair and Associate Dean, University of Toronto, Faculty of Law

Speakers:

Jeremy Kinsman, Former Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom and former Canadian Ambassador to the European Union

Pierre Martin, Professor, Department of Political Science, Université de Montréal

Janice Stein, Director, Munk Centre for International Studies, University of Toronto

12:030 – 1:00 Pacific Keynote Address: Asia’s Role in the World of 2017

Dominic Barton, Worldwide Managing Director, McKinsey & Co.

One of Canada's most accomplished international business leaders, Dominic Barton is an authority on the emerging economic powers of Asia, particularly China. Having previously led McKinsey's office in Korea, and serving as its Chairman of Asia, based in Shanghai, he has advised clients in a range of industries, helping transform institutions from local and regional players into global leaders. He will focus on macro-trends driving the astonishing pace of change in China, India and other Asian economies, and the implications for Canada.
